Turkeys for the Thanksgiving trade, both alive and dressed, began to arrive by the first official exhibition of Le Syndicate de Defense de la de Couture Francaise," opened yesterday in car lots and by express. At West Washington Market thirty-two of which came from Canada, were received. It will take at least twenty-three cars more of live turkeys to supply the demand. This stock comes principally from Texas, Missouri, Oklahoma, Illinois, Ohio, Kentucky and Tennessee. A car of turkeys will average 14,000 pounds, making the total of live poultry for Thanksgiving 770,000 pounds. This year the price from first hands is 20 cents a nound making a total valuation. Paris fashion fete, according to door refused to sell any more tickets, it was an audience of women, for the few men who had the temerity to go became timid when they learned that the gowns were valued at $1,000 to $154,000. Consumers will pay an average of 5 cents a pound more than the cost from first hands, adding $37,500 to the first cost, or making $181,500, the value of live turkeys to consumers just for Thanksgiving dinners. Weather conditions are unusually augusted to the first cost, or making $181,500, the value of live turkeys to consumers just for Thanksgiving dinners. Gorgeous indeed were the gowns, also the hats and jewels. The jewels, sent by the house of Cartier, are valued at $100,000. The clothes shown are priced at $100,000. Just one plain and simple dress was seen, and that was the one worn by Miss Ellen Mortimer, who took the part of the maid in the play. Her cestume was loaned by the Nurses Outfitting Association, and one woman in the audience declared that when it appeared on the stage among the glittering gowns for which Roger Boutet de Monvel's commedicita was the vehicle its called folds had quite a depressed droop.

Where so many lovely gowns are shown it is hopeless to select any for description, but one by Poiret—poor Poiret, who is now at the front overseeing the manufacture of soldiers' uniforms—must be mentioned, because it was enhanced by the pretty pink bare feet of the mannequin who wore it. It is called "Etruske," and as the name shows is Grecian in design—a straight hanging skirt of lustrous white silk, and a waist consisting of a straight double band of satin ribbon, worked in a design of black and yellow, and finished top and bottom with Pompeian red. The mannequin wore a Grecian head-dress and Greek sandals on her under the auspices of the French Gov. dress and Greek sandals on her unstockinged feet.

The fete will end Saturday evening.
